Cue the Romance! How to Spend a 3 Day Honeymoon in Paris

Monday, April 11, 2016 | by Erin Lindholm

At once cosmopolitan, historic and effortlessly chic, Paris remains an unparalleled destination for romance — and honeymoons! The key to planning a mini honeymoon in the City of Light — whether it's your first visit or your fifth — is to not try to do it all. Instead, create a list of "must sees" together with your fiancé. Plan on getting to a couple of sites each day, but also take time for the small stuff: appreciating the views from your Parisian flat; lingering over un café au lait at a sidewalk cafe; strolling arm-in-arm on the Seine, and through the city streets, soaking it all in. Before you know it, Paris will have you swooning.

Romantic Outings in the City of Light

There are an infinite number of ways to experience Paris. For a more intimate encounter, consider adding one of the city's smaller museums to your itinerary. The Picasso, Rodin or Gustave Moreau museums feature masterworks in elegant settings that are inevitably less crowded.

A picnic lunch in any one of Paris' iconic green spaces is always a good idea. Rue Mouffetard, affectionately known as "le Mouffe" by locals, is one of the city's most beloved market streets, home to many food shops and also a farmer's market in the morning. Shop and sample your way down the street before heading to nearby Luxembourg Gardens.

Consider booking a once-in-a-lifetime experience pour deux. Discover 7 Travel Services specializes in just such amenities. Two on offer in Paris include a private cooking class with a Parisian chef in the intimacy of his own home and a private tour of the Eiffel Tower after dark — no doubt the tower's sparkling light show is the perfect backdrop to a newlywed Champagne toast.
